The Directory of e-Learning Suppliers was created to help executives in corporate universities and managers of training facilities save time in comparing and selecting e-Learning suppliers. The industry of potential e-Learning suppliers is large and difficult to distinguish among, as many of them make similar claims. This list provides a beginning place that sorts the suppliers into useful categories and gives information on their size, number of employees and time in business. This list is strictly for informational purposes as a convenience. You can think of it like a search engine on your browser — we have combed out the unimportant and irrelevant. All firms on this list are actively involved in some aspect of e-Learning. When you are thinking about finding an e-Learning supplier, start with this list — look through our categories — then contact firms directly to be clarify if they have what you need. This list does not endorse one company over another, rather, it is an objective survey of leading e-Learning suppliers.

In this book, E-learning site developer Doyle begins with a crash course in Macromedia Dreamweaver MX, and then skillfully guides readers through the development of their first online learning course.
