It is well accepted that education needs to be equalised along gender lines. However, until the management of education is also gender sensitive, that content cannot expect to be effectively communicated. This is the premise of this groundbreaking book. It addresses gender issues and management practices in education, by critically examining both successes and failures drawn from a number of African countries. It proposes ways of improving the management of education to focus on women – who have hitherto been left out of the mainstream of educational and training practices. It throws a uniquely African light on an issue that goes to the heart of the process of democratisation. In order to empower the girl child in the new South Africa and in Africa, the patriarchal and parochial structures that exist within the African educational paradigm need to be broken down and replaced. This would address problems such as: why women are discouraged from certain fields of studies, like sciences; the effect that interactions in learning situations can have on the achievement and attainment of female students; and the critical necessity of educating and training girls in rural Africa. The book speaks to the heart of the administrative processes within the education framework and shows how the way classes are structured or materials selected needs to be adapted in order to correct the present imbalance. It was created and developed with the aim of seeking out the best education management practices, finding common analyses from these and using them to develop guidelines for future education management.

Elephant tourism is a growing activity in many countries across Asia and Africa and is popular with tourists from all parts of the world. Elephant tourism has grown rapidly, providing the only viable way for elephants and their owners to survive since the banning of logging. Old logging camps have been developed into sanctuaries for some elephants, but many other camps were established as entertainment centres, resulting in serious welfare issues for the elephants and their mahouts. The profits from elephant tourism in Asia have encouraged African operators to follow a similar business model. This book draws attention to the need for a comprehensive and rigorous focus on local solutions to improve the welfare of captive elephants, their mahouts and local residents, and to enhance tourists' experiences of elephant tourism.

Extrait de l'introduction : "Many women in the rural areas of Zimbabwe are organized into groups, which have 10–20 members each. The groups undertake income-generating activities [...]. These activities are performed on a part-time basis. The women work in their small enterprise activities during "chisi", the day of the week when one traditionally is not allowed to work in the fields. The primary source of income for all the women is semi-subsistence farming. [...] Since most of the harvest is retained to feed the family, only a small surplus is left to sell. [...] Research showed, however, that often women were contributing more mone to their small businesses than they were earning from them. In the light of these meagre results, the project "Action to Assist Rural Women" was designed [...]. Its developmenal objectives are : [1] to improve the organizational, managerial and economic performance of women's groups in the rural areas ; and [2] to increase the participation of women in the socio-economic development process. To fulfil these objectives, the project staff developed a two-pronged approach : training for both the women's groups and the extension workers ; and the implementation of a credit scheme with a local bank. Why this manual ? [The authors] would like to share [their] experiences of the extensino worker training programme with others in the small enterprise development field because [they] found [their] approach useful and effective. [...] This manual may be used by those who design training programmes in small enterprise development for extension worers, who, in turn, assist rural women with their income generating activities. In addition, trainers in small enterprise development may refer to this manual for course material."

When South African conservationist Lawrence Anthony was asked to accept a herd of "rogue" wild elephants on his Thula Thula game reserve in Zululand, his common sense told him to refuse. But he was the herd's last chance of survival: they would be killed if he wouldn't take them. In order to save their lives, Anthony took them in. In the years that followed he became a part of their family. And as he battled to create a bond with the elephants, he came to realize that they had a great deal to teach him about life, loyalty, and freedom. The Elephant Whisperer is a heartwarming, exciting, funny, and sometimes sad account of Anthony's experiences with these huge yet sympathetic creatures. Set against the background of life on an African game reserve, with unforgettable characters and exotic wildlife, it is a delightful book that will appeal to animal lovers and adventurous souls everywhere.
