To the revisionists approach, the Cold War was caused by the United States factor, rather than Soviet Union expansionism. They argued that at the end of World War II, the structure of international relations was not really in the bipolarity structure. The Soviet Union capabilities were much weaker than the United States.

We describe the reality of the bipolar Cold War and how it is only partly reflected in polarity theory and neorealism. The period was marked by the combination of power bipolarity (two superpowers), cluster bipolarity (bipolarization), and a military and ideological confrontation between two blocs with different economic and political regimes.

The bipolarity of the Cold War was changed into multipolarity due to the lack of political will of the United States to act on the unipolar moment. In 2001, and with a new president in office, the structure changed again. This time the G.W. Bush administration was keen to play the role of a global governor.

characterization of the Cold War as being bipolar based upon the neorealist idea of the distribution of power (Wagner, 1993, pp. 77-98).

~~Social Constructivism Vs. Neorealism in Analysing the Cold War~~

"bipolarity" refers to the distribution of power among states after World War II; and, it is that peculiar distribution of power, some scholars claim, that accounts for both the antagonism that developed between the United States and the Soviet Union and the fact that that antagonism, though intense, did not

Following a review of the structural realist theory on bipolarity, Tunsjø shows that China is now powerful enough to become the sole peer competitor to the United States, thus marking a return of bipolarity in world politics. To further make his case, Tunsjø compares the contemporary distribution of power with the prototypical bipolarity of the Cold War. This comparison leads to his geo-structural realist theory.
