The novels in William Faulkner's Snopes trilogy are mainly comedies, uneasily as they may sit in that category. The Mansion begins with Mink Snopes, on trial for murder, waiting for his successful cousin Flem to show up and use his power and influence to get him off. Flem doesn't come, and Mink spends his prison sentence biding his time until he's free and can murder him.

The Mansion tells of Mink Snopes, whose archaic sense of honor brings about the downfall of his cousin Flem. "For all his concern with the South, Faulkner was actually seeking out the nature of man," noted Ralph Ellison. "Thus we must turn to him for that continuity of moral purpose which made for the greatness of our classics."
